Shakespearian Tragedy

H. B. CHARLTON

The Clark Lectures for 1947. Professor Charlton, declaring himself "a devout Bradleyite," examines the "Experimental" and "Apprentice" pieces and the four great tragedies in turn in search of the tragic idea which he believes underlies them. 12s. 6d. net

Taste and Technique in Book-Collecting

JOHN CARTER

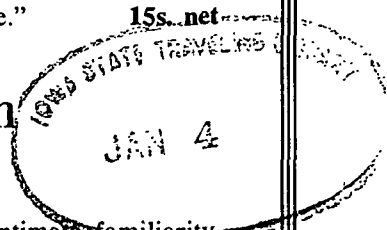

Mr Carter's Sandars Lectures in Bibliography discuss recent trends in Britain and America. As witty as they are wise, they are addressed to "a thoughtful and a moderately knowledgeable audience." 15s. net

Medieval Lincoln

J. W. F. HILL

An example of local history at its best, based on intimate familiarity with the place, drawing on first-hand sources and making constant reference to the best secondary authorities. 25 figures; 22 plates. 42s. net

These papers include new information about famous members of Oriel College, ranging from Sir Walter Raleigh to Cardinal Newman. Among the subjects of memoirs are William Prynne, Lord Chief Justice Holt and Gilbert White. Some of the people here portrayed may claim attention because of their connexion with more eminent men: examples of this are the Oriel friends of Dr. Johnson and a patron of George Washington.
